oftener imaginary than real. In a recent issue of your paper your Hixburg correspondent undertakes to show my failure in connection with the Bridge proposition. The facts are, the Board ordered a bridge estimated by the board to cost $5000. I took the matter up at once and had the necessary surveys, plans and estimates made, the cost estimate being $10,600 instead of $5000; this of itself would have delayed further work. In the meantime I was trying to buy a bridge, but no one had anything at any price; the government having taken over the whole steel product till close of the war; within the last six months the route of the State highway has been under discussion and is still unsettled.
